I stumbled upon this last night. Needless to say, Bob's early passing doesn't even seem real to me. Bob was a shipmate and friend on the USS Independence through a cold hard winter in the Philly shipyards and then a cruise around the horn and up to San Diego. When others were protesting the hard work and living conditions, especially in the yards, I never heard Bob complain even once. I admired his intelligence, sincerity, honesty and stoic sense of humor. When things seemed impossible, Bob had a smile and lifted people around him to 'get it done'. God bless you and keep you Bob and your family, and I'm so honored to have called you my friend. Fair winds and following seas.

Bob, time is passing so slowly now, everywhere I turn I feel your presence here with me. My heart still weighs a million tons, and I know you want us to be happy for you now you are in Heaven with God, our Savior. My tears won't stop flowing. My eyes are drowned in floods. Though the days keep passing by, my world is frozen in time. I keep asking God to help me understand why he took you away from us so young in life. He told me you were a good man, who lived life the way we should in His will not ours. You have freely of your heart, you helped everyone who crossed your path, and you never asked for anything in return. God felt your pain and heard your struggles, he saw you were tired. God chose to bless you with eternal peace, eternal life. Please help my heart to heal, to move on and keep strong. Thank you brother Bob, for all you have done for me. Thank you for all the precious memories you have left us all with. Thank you for your love. I miss you so much, I feel one day soon, I just might wake up from this dream. Life does not seem real to me now. I just wish we could have one last day together, one more laugh, one more hug, one more kiss, one more conversation. Just one more day, I will always pray for you. I love you. Little Le...
