We've known Mary for at least 15 years and have always enjoyed catching up with her and Mark, sometimes accidentally at a restaurant or out and about in East Nashville. I really enjoyed their company. I admired how, even amidst significant health issues of late, she and Mark seemed to continue to enjoy life to the fullest. As a Facebook friend of them both, I couldn't help thinking when I saw their posts, "Well, there they are in Florida again--living it up!" They seemed like the dynamic duo and I can't imagine how hard this is for all of you. Our love to you, dear Taylor family. Mimi Gerber/Tom Smythe

As a teenager we were always hanging out at Mark and Mary's house working on cars, listening to music, eating food, messing with Jeremy. Mary liked to cook and we had dinner there a lot and brownies, delicious brownies. One funny moment I remember was when Mary fell down some steps or something and Mark called her "the faint, flying Wallenda". The love between Mark and Mary was something you don't see much and few people will ever know but it was obvious to anyone that had the pleasure of being at the Taylor house.
