So sad to hear about Mr. Brady's passing. He was the one who introduced me to my love of strings. I played the viola (per his recommendation), and fell in love with it! I had two wonderful years under his direction in music, and learned how to read music and he even gave us sheet music to music we would hear on our radio. Mr. Brady knew how to draw us in an such a young age. I was only 10 when I started, and at age 36, still love strings like I did that day. I was looking him up to see if he was still teaching so I could continue my lessons years later. So sad he is gone, but he will NEVER be forgotten. Thank you Mr. Brady for your teachings. May you rest in love

Michael M.Brady and his cello represented the epitome of the guts, soul, hopes and dreams of string players in Nashville's predominately African American communities, from the 1960's through the next 6 decades. His creative mind let him to teach, write, produce and perform music in the country, gospel, classical, jazz, rock, pop and rhythm & blues genres. Rest peacefully, Michael Brady.Sheila Adkins Scales
