She welcomed me with open arms many years ago when Jeff and I got together. She was always loving and funny and sweet. I know this is the toughest day of my husband's life. We will miss her greatly.

She loved me unconditionally since the moment she met me. She made it clear I was her grandbaby even if we didn't share blood. She loved everyone. I miss her greatly.

My grandmother was a stereotypical southern woman. She loved her coca-cola, her southern gospel music, getting her hair done, and was polite as hell. I will always remember how many times she emphasized she loved me (and my wife) and was proud of us.
